AAHP Special Session

Edgar D. Bailey, CHP, AAHP Past President

The American Academy of Health Physics (AAHP) will be presenting “Professional Ethics and Health Physics” at the 2015 Health Physics Society Annual Meeting being held in Indianapolis, Indiana. The Tuesday, 14 July, special session will focus on a topic of great concern to most health physicists and members of the public: namely the professional ethics of health physicists and the impact of professional ethics on the decisions that are made with regard to radiation protection. We have a panel of six nationally and internationally renowned specialists in professional ethics and radiation protection.

Speaking at the special session will be:

- Alexander Brandl—“Professional Ethics in Radiation Protection 101”
- Robert J. Emery—“Ethical Decision Making Tools for Enhancing Radiation Safety Culture”
- Ray Johnson—“Professional Ethics and Truth in Radiation Risk Communications”
- John W. Poston, Sr.—“A University Perspective on Ethics Training for Engineers and Health Physicists”
- Richard E. Toohey—“The ICRP/IRPA Initiative on the Ethical Basis of Radiation Protection”
- Renate Czarwinski—“Ethical Issues and Radiation Protection Culture—Challenges and Views From the Professionals”

This day-long session will present the fundamentals of professional ethics and develop these ideas and understandings into the present-day activities related to the ethical basis for radiation protection.

The speakers will discuss the role of professional ethics in the training of health physicists and their importance in the day-to-day practice of health physics. Please join us for an enjoyable and enlightening program.
